Little Angels Eco-school, Panvel, celebrated its silver jubilee function on February 26.

The eco-school has been organising several activities all through the year and the theme-based decorations in white and silver with an eco-friendly touch of flowers and plants.

Smita Godrej Crishna, who manages the Godrej schools, was the chief guest. She interacted and saw the various demonstrations and activities put up by the children and teachers of the school. She was touched with the dedication and quality of education that the school provided right from the pre-school age in a small city like Panvel. She then left a mark on the graffiti board created for this event.

"We are the only school in Navi Mumbai to be appreciated by Dr A P J Abdul Kalam. We not only give eco-friendly education to our students but also keep them in touch with our culture, traditions and ideals," informs Prachiti Mhatre, head mistress of the school.

The director, Swaroop Mhatre, expressed her feelings about the 25-year-long journey. This was followed by felicitation of the teachers with a silver-plated certificate of appreciation.

The function was attended by the students and parents, ex-students with their parents, grandparents, local dignitaries and other educationists.

"They were all very proud of their school and were glad to interact and meet the teachers and each other after a long time. The graffiti board was filled with praises and best wishes by all who attended the function," adds Prachiti.
